

The big trip

Helping you plan for the year's biggest and best biking events

RED TREAD SPANISH OFF-ROAD HOLIDAYS, DATES TO SUIT

What is it?

A weekend (or week depending on how long you've got) off-road riding in the mountains of Southern Spain.

Ian Burgess and Sally, the organisers, live there all year and know the best places to ride. The tour will take you from sea level up to the high peaks of the Maroma Mountain which stands 2000m.

You'll be riding CCM's 404 Enduro and 404 Dual Sport. The accommodation is first class, set in the Spanish National Park, which is where you'll be doing the riding. The hotel is only 10 minutes from restaurants and shops. There is a swimming pool on site and the rooms are all en suite.

How much will it cost?

The tours range from one day to a full week throughout the year. For a one-day tour without accommodation it will cost £140. The full week, which is seven nights and five days of riding, costs £795.

You will be supplied with a 2006 model bike with fuel, enduro jacket, trousers, boots, gloves, helmets and all body protection. There will be qualified instructors with you all the time as well. Personal accident insurance is also included.

Anything else?

The people at Redtread have also set up three two-day riding tours next year with Mick Extance, Britain's most successful Dakar Rally rider.

These tours, with instruction from Extance, will cost £595.

BEEN THERE, DONE THAT PAUL DAVIES, FROM LONDON

"All in all a first class weekend with first class people. If you're thinking about going don't, just get on and book it! You won't regret it."
